NEW YORK (CBSNewYork) — For one flower shop, the bouquets are put together and sent out with a lot of extra love.

It's the busiest time of the year at Vaseful Flower Shop in Edison, N.J.

Darius and Jose pay close attention as they place the finishing touches on an arrangement, CBS2's Alex Denis reported.

To them, it's not just another Valentine's Day order — they're made with love — for your love — by very capable hands.

At Vaseful, people with disabilities receive job training while earning a paycheck for their hard work all thanks to a grant from the Kessler Foundation — a charity dedicated to improving the lives of people with physical and mental disabilities, Denis reported.

"We try to concentrate on what people can do rather than what they can't do," said Steven Verba, Managing Director of the Community Options Inc.

And, they can do a lot.

"I make sure they're even all around," said Audrey.

When it comes time to arrange the flowers, Audrey, in particular, has great attention to detail. Even water temperature matters to her.

It's passion like this that earned these employees the right to work side-by-side professional florists, Denis reported.
